A) CIA is a basic security Model, which has three components: Confidentiality, Integrity and Availability, used by organizations to design, evaluate and enforce a balanced information security policy throughout the infrastructure. Validating data integrity with techniques such as cryptographic hashing ensures that data doesn't get corrupted or tampered with during its lifecycle, empowering businesses to make informed decisions without worrying about financial or operational data changes.

Summarized by © lakhasly.com