

Recycling can be defined as collecting used materials, converting them into raw materials, and then reproducing them into consumables again. Recycling these materials reduces the depletion of many resources from nature. Such as oil, natural gas, trees, coal and mineral ores. protects the environment