

The absolute amount of cholesterol contained within the tissues of the body at any time is the net balance at that time between input and output.