

Aron Ralston is a wonderful man who has been teaching a very important lesson. CNN Cooper Saturday Morning and Norville CNBC. Aron Lee Ralston born in 27 October 1975 in Marion, Ohio, his parents are Larry Ralston and Donna Ralston, when Aron was 12 years old his family moved to Colorado, and that move laid the foundations for his love of canyon walking. In Ocotillo, Tacoma, and Albuquerque, Ralston worked as a mechanical engineer for five years but he was burned out by a large corporation. He worked as a resident assistant at Carnegie Mellon, studied abroad and played in sports inside the city he also worked as a rafting guide during the summer. The radio program The Bob Rivers Show on 28 September 2004 described his ordeal as 'six journeys of terror and horror.' "We found no chance of conviction in our assessment" said Melissa Drazen-Smith, Deputy Prosecution Director at the office of the city attorney in Denver. He has also performed on The Howard Stern Show, The Ellen Degeneres Show, Bill Hemmer CN N's American Morning, 360. He went to high school in Cherry Creek to learn skiing and backpacking. He received a degree in mechanics and French with a minor in piano from Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh. Aron Ralston has impressed many with his amazing survival story and managed to survive his ordeal, despite his troubles. He went to Aspen, Colorado to follow a life of mountains climbing. He developed mountain skills during his time as an engineer and left for Denali in 2002. He earned USC Scriptor Award. He followed his dad, who was an outdoor man as well. If it seems impossible to live and everything go wrong, have confidence in yourself.