

Many college students face financial difficulties. Even students who qualify for enough financial help to meet immediate education expenditures must deal with the financial stress of knowing they will be responsible for repaying a big sum of money after graduation. This can include the battle to find enough money to pay for tuition as well as the finances required to support living expenses while in school.