

The compounds in a homologous series have similar chemical properties, and their physical properties gradually change as the molecular size increases