

Though listening ability is one of the important skills in foreign language learning, there has been relatively little research in this specific area. The results of the study showed that accent, pronunciation, speed of speech, insufficient vocabulary, different accent of speakers, lack of concentration, anxiety, and bad quality of recording were the major listening comprehension problems encountered by EFL Saudi learners. Suggestions are made for addressing problems regarding how teachers can help their students overcome listening comprehension problems.