

A web-based project management solution permits each team member to report back on project tasks and activities throughout the working day instead of relying on status meetings, or asking each individual for an update. The beauty of web-based solutions is that each project resource is empowered to report back on his or her tasks, pushing the responsibility back where it belongs, to the team member.