

income statement, and cash flow statement, provide stakeholders such as investors, creditors, and management with vital information to evaluate a company's financial condition.