

There is a growing demand for different types of user authentication technologies for both online and in physical systems. Organizations need to understand that passwords are not the only way to authenticate users.