There is a growing demand for different types of user authentication technologies for both online and in physical systems. Organizations need to understand that passwords are not the only way to authenticate users.
Summarized by © lakhasly.com