

Many people think that the nursing profession is only for women, and there are a large number of people who do not understand the importance of male nurses, but today I will talk about whether a woman who nurses is better than a man or not. I agree, because women have more feelings and feelings than men, and they also take care of people carefully and always take the initiative to do good deeds, and they do not like to see someone tired or sick, as this is an innate nature for women, unlike men. They often handle difficult tasks. On other hand, It is possible to enlist the help of men to carry out nursing work that requires a lot of muscle effort. Men nurses constitute a significant percentage of the number of workers in the nursing field, but the role of women in nursing people cannot be dispensed with because of the feelings and feelings that women carry. Finally, I think that if they are together this constitutes a kind of cooperation, then each of them can take care of the same gender so that no embarrassment is caused to the sick man or woman.
