

1– To provide communication between different hardware components. 2– To provide power to the different hardware components. 3– To control and manage the flow of data between the different hardware components.