

In an age where you can buy almost anything on the Internet, thousands of people all over the world still prefer to do their shopping in traditional places. Many markets around the world have a similar lively atmosphere and sell nearly anything you can imagine from jewelry and clothes, fresh produce, spices, and fish, to carpets, electronics, and livestock. This is particularly popular with tourists.