

Power generation involves converting various forms of primary energy (such as coal, oil, natural gas, enriched uranium, or renewable sources like water, wind, and solar) into electric energy.