

Tangible costs/benefits are easily quantifiable in dollars, unlike intangible ones. Direct costs are directly tied to project outputs, while indirect costs are related but not directly to production. Crucially, sunk costs – past expenses – should be excluded from project investment decisions.