

Many people exist, but few are living life and enjoying it by experiencing different things and spending their time doing things that they love. I start planning things I want to do after school on my diary, then my siblings and I help our mother on preparing breakfast after getting ready for school, we all sit and talk about our goals for the day and share it together to support each others. During the night time?