

Recycling rubber, particularly from tires, is an innovative and sustainable approach to creating energy-efficient materials for green buildings. The incorporation of recycled rubber into green building designs helps in reducing landfill waste, conserving natural resources, and cutting down on the carbon footprint of construction projects.