

The after he us one me okes These diferences consomen the suet counts oks magane antel ta how discussions and okes.comprehension processed.henication it it and entes e me ten omen seem myseras each ote to on co sonal no ta they are ate ped confusing People on a mened woren ae fom difent Janets or thatthey are difeter Sedes.So she got into the habit of standing in front of the TV and Sayng, Hirosh, I'm about to ask you a question: I's become sort of a family joke.* fesearch has shown that these communication differences can be partially explained by the different ways in which tre male and female brains are structured and wired.One basic reason men and women have such different ways of communicating is that they see the purpose of communicatie difeet Research snows tend to use language to share on as way of growing doser to people and establishing humate relationshis.For example, the left side of the brain, where logic and literal Compete procesed, tends to be strenger in men.It ensures that a variety of topics and viewpoints are explored, feelings are expressed, and problems are discussed and solved.Although men do not tend to use communication to achieve closeness, they have their own way di bonding."I told my brother Derek about a problem I was having with my studies. He immediately came up with possible solutions to the problem. Being told how to fix the problem was kind of frustrating because it wasn't what I was looking for. I asked him to stop trying to fx the problem and try talking with me about it instead. He seemed completely confused and said, Why bother talking about a problem unless you're trying to find a solution to it?"But ust What ore these comuntation diers and what is their cause?In one study, 75 percent of the men surveyed said that their most meaningful experiences with friends came not through talking, but through shared activities.In a related study, researchers found that fathers tend to show affection to sons by helping them with tasks and challenges.Meanwhile, men tend to see the goal of communication as accomplishing a task.Javier Morales s experiences certainly support this idea.Sakur Kum has witnessed this many times in her house.Being rased in such different ways is bound to create two different styles of communication.persuade, argue, convey facts.?????????