

In most discussions of environmental issues, it is generally assumed that environmental problems have affected only contemporary societies. Similarly, acid rain and air pollution are to a great extent