

While some may argue that beauty is superficial, there is reason to believe that beauty is an important part of personal and societal contexts.