

Scaling up the diameter of the optics requires a corresponding increase in focal length. Increasing the focal length, requires that the linear dimensions of the detector are increased, in order to maintain a constant FoV