

With a positive net present value, a positive yearly worth, and a benefit–cost ratio better than 1, the E–Health card firm project is a smart investment, according to our analysis. To guarantee the project's long–term financial and economic viability, it is crucial for project managers and investors to periodically assess and modify these aspects.