

Deep in the New Forest where no big people ever went there was a tiny little magical village called the Ordon Gardens. One day Incisor realised that the teeth coming into the cleaning factory were not as strong as they used be. "Oh dear!" said Incisor "These teeth are fragile and brittle, with holes and black spots. Here, three little tooth fairies named Incisor, Canine and Molar were busy at work in their factory. Incisor was tall and skinny with short pink hair, Canine was also tall with blue hair and Molar was the short, wise one with curly, silver locks. The milk teeth were used to make very useful things in the Ordon Gardens like roads in the village and furniture in the homes for the little fairies. She perched beside him and braced herself in preparation for the task... All day long the busy little fairies cleaned and shined the children's milk teeth they had collected during the night. Off she flew with a bag of coins, some white berry sandwiches for her lunch and a pack of cards which the three fairies had spent all afternoon preparing. Whatever are we to do?" "Yes." said Canine "I know exactly what's wrong, The children are beginning to eat far too many sweets and are not looking after their teeth at all." The three fairies looked at each other and waited while Molar explained all. It was such a treat to leave the forest and see the city skyline but it was a dangerous place for fairies. Mummy tucked Junior into bed and told him all about the tooth fairy who would leave some money in exchange for his tooth. She flew in through the top window that was ajar and glided quickly down to Junior's pillow. The three tooth fairies were all named after types of teeth. They crumble as soon as I try to polish them with my cloth. Said Molar the wise one. That night, it was Canine's turn to fly off and collect all the milk teeth from under the sleeping children's pillow. Canine had to make sure that the big people never saw her. She flew through the starry sky and saw the wonderful city fast asleep. By the time Canine arrived, Junior was fast asleep. "I know...we can fix it!" She sounded quite excited by her grand idea. As usual, it was a fabulous idea. The three of them wasted no time at all and got to work straight away. Her first stop was a young boy named Junior. Earlier in the night Junior and his mum had placed his milk tooth under the pillow. She gave him a goodnight kiss and left him to fall asleep.
