

Talib, Fahd, Moza and Sharifa were on vacation with their family in Egypt. The market was full of people rushing around and the smell of spices and perfumes wafted in the air. One quiet afternoon, they decided to go explore the market to find a gift for their grandparents in Amman. On the map, there was a small red cross with arrows telling them where to go. Moza thought that if they followed the map, they would find something. They decided to enter a small shop filled with beautiful jewelry, rugs, and boxes. A tall man with a thin black mustache was looking at some silver boxes in the store. Show the map to Fahd and his sisters. After a short discussion, they all agree to follow the map and solve the puzzle. Suddenly he passed them and left the store. A small silver jewelry box fell to the ground where he was standing. A student picked up the box. It was beautiful and they decided to buy it for their grandmother. Outside the store, a student opened the box and found a small piece of paper inside. It was a map!
