

In the first experiment, catalase was more active with  $\text{H}_2\text{O}_2$  because it showed that there was a higher measurement of bubbles. Any higher or lower pH affects hydrogen bonds and Enzyme structure, leading to decreased activity. As for sucrose, good bubbles appeared, which means that the reaction was good. Catalase with water was only a control, and no reaction appeared.