

The process of making administrative decisions is considered one of the processes that determine the extent of the ability and efficiency of management regarding the performance of employees.