

The purpose of this paper is to investigate the performance of starch in potable water treatment and to optimize the operating conditions to see if starch can be used in removing heavy elements and dyes in water that rice starch is an anionic polymer with the dosage of rice starch, pH, and settling time as control factors (1).