

Biological Action: The accumulation of algae and large microbial population which is so called dirty skin on the sand surface in the top layer will form a gelatinous film around sand grains; this film will retain the finally divided or colloidal particles.