

1– Goals that must be achieved: External environmental studies help the organization to set goals, or adjust them according to the results of those studies, in addition to its role in setting operational goals for different departments, for example studying the conditions of society helps to determine the approach, action steps and the time during which it can Providing the various requirements, and studying this community helps in setting up educational and advocacy programs for the required spread .