

Many factors have contributed to the lack of water in the Horn of Africa. Among them are climate change, droughts, global warming, and other natural disasters. In order to collect even the smallest amounts of water, women and children must walk lengthy and perilous distances for hours each day.