

The study found that enhancing the political awareness of Iraqi women is an essential element to achieve the goals of sustainable development, as the literature has shown that there is a close and interrelated relationship between the level of political awareness of Iraqi women and their active participation in political life, which contributes to enhancing their ability to positively influence the formulation of public policies and support sustainable development.