

More than 4,500 years ago, well-to-do Sumerians were wheeling around Ur in donkey-powered carts and chariots. Whether or not their civilization ever reached the point where wives demanded chariots of their own for shopping is not known, but archæologists believe that the Sumerians were among the first to possess wheels and wheeled vehicles.