

A smile covers my face as I look up to see Emily looking down at me as I awake from my nap. Patient name: Cole Inwell Occupation: Store Clerk Reason for hospitalization: Murder, untreated schizophrenia Case: Murdered Emily Sherman due to a psychotic episode of untreated schizophrenia. We stay there in the same position before she stands up. "Come on, we should go now, this was fun." I agree and I try to stand up. I couldn't move. My chest begins to feel heavy as I try to move. I start wheezing as if something is lying on top of me. I am taken out of my dream the same feeling as if something laying on my chest remains. After a while, my eyes adjust to the darkness, and that's when I see it. On top of me lay a woman with bruised skin tattered in dirt. Its black hair was matted on its face, Her long dirty nails caressed my chest as she stared at me with her black sunken eyes. She then spoke. Her voice was so mesmerizing like the singing of birds. It was the voice of the woman I love. it said in Emily's voice "I've missed you." Emily looks over at us overhearing Mathew's comment with a look of annoyance as she shoots us a middle finger before going back to her duties. I blush a little embarrassed from my cheesy comment but Emily laughs.