

The main problem lies in surgical site infections (SSIs), which often stem from the absence of antimicrobial properties inherent in standard absorbable sutures.